

A False and Corrupt Doctrine.

Polygamy is a libel upon the Mormon Church—a false and corrupt doctrine, repudiated by the early leaders of Mormonism in the most solemn and earnest manner. Disowned by the man who is now claimed by church leaders to have received the so-called revelation authorizing its practice among the people. Forbidden and strictly prohibited by the Books of Mormon, and doctrines and covenants.

Brigham Young, the present head of the Mormon Church, in giving publicity to this so-called revelation, asserted that it was received by Joseph Smith in 1843. Brigham published it in 1852—waiting nearly nine years before he ventured to disgrace the civilization of the age and entail untold future misery upon his followers by proclaiming it a portion of the Mormon faith in defiance of every record of the church against it. The fact is worthy of note that the present leaders approached this fostering sore with a great deal of caution; but, their desires and inclinations finally conquered, and they threw down the gauntlet before the bar of christianity, and for years have labored to establish the system in defiance of every sentiment of their own religion, the religions of the age and the enlightenment of the present century.

Let us briefly refer to a portion of the record, bearing in mind the oft repeated assertion of the present leaders, that Polygamy is a portion of their religious faith transmitted to them by Joseph Smith, the founder and defender of Mormonism.

We find on page 423, No. 3, Vol. 5, Times and Seasons of February 1st, 1844, a Mormon periodical published in Nauvoo, and edited by John Taylor and Wilford Woodruff, both leading members of the church, and now counted among the Twelve Apostles, the following document. Read it carefully:

NOTICE.—As we have lately been credibly informed that an elder of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by the name of Hiram Brown, has been preaching Polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines in the county of Lapeer, State of Michigan. This is to notify him and the church in general, that he has been cut off from the church for his iniquity; and he is further notified to appear at the special conference, on the 6th of April next to make answer to these charges.

(Signed)
JOSEPH SMITH,
HYRUM SMITH,
Presidents of said church.

The present church leader claims that Smith received the Polygamy revelation in 1843. Yet here we have a document from the same Smith in 1844, denouncing Polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines, and cutting off from the church the man who attempted to disgrace his religion by preaching such iniquity.

Now the question naturally arises shall the Mormon people believe Brigham Young or Joseph Smith? Both cannot be right—for each one has made an assertion as far apart as is the North Pole from the South Pole. We have heard a good deal said lately in a Mormon organ about people slandering the dead to spite and annoy the living. Is Smith slandered by the present leaders when, in face of the above solemn protest, they claim that nearly a year prior to this denial he received the revelation authorizing Polygamy? Are the people, who believe that the Book of Mormon is a correct spiritual guide, willing to have it asserted by present leaders that Joseph Smith was a charlatan, an impostor, a falsifier, and a wolf hid beneath a sheep skin? We hardly think so. Then what is the inevitable conclusion—nothing less than this—that the present leaders have falsely and outrageously forced a foul and beastly system upon the chosen religion of Joseph Smith, and slandered the dead leader in face of his protest—among the last of his official acts—against the iniquity.

But to proceed with the record—we find in No. 6, Vol. 5, of the same Times and Seasons, and on page 474, the following additional denial from the head of the church. We ask a careful reading of it:

Nauvoo, March 15, 1844.

To the Brethren of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints living on China Creek in Hancock County, greeting:

"Whereas, Brother Richard Hewitt has called on me to-day, to know my views concerning some doctrines that are preached in your place, and states to me that some of your elders say 'that a man having a certain priesthood may have as many wives as he pleases, and that the doctrine is taught here,' I say unto you that that man teaches false doctrines, for there is no such doctrine taught here, and any man that is found teaching, privately or publicly, any such doctrine is culpable and will stand a chance to be brought before the High Council and lose his license and membership also. Therefore he had better beware what he is about."

(Signed) HYRUM SMITH.

This is a very small portion of the church record against Polygamy. How do the people of Utah like it? How much more is required to satisfy them that the present leaders have debased and prostituted their religion, giving the lie to the solemn protest of the first leaders of the church against the infamous outrage?

Yesterday we published an item in regard to Miss Amanda Fletcher, who has been rescued from the Indians by Maj. Wyncoop, at Fort Larned, Kansas. Yesterday we met the father of the girl, who is a miner in the Rush Valley mines. His address is, Jasper Fletcher, Stockton, Rush Valley, Utah.

FROM UTAH TO MONTANA.

III.

"Home Station" comforts.—The companionary voyage—Idaho's sole inter-tribal highway—The West—What's to be seen to the right and left—The "Three Women's Breads"—Rocky Mountain trade, reality versus romance—The morale of mountain travel, &c.

Our last left us dozing down and up the hillside, from Bear River northward, whither we jogged along until Aurora peeped from the far orient, awakening the massive mountains which slept stolidly through the cold and still night. Soon the shadowy sameness of six hours' travel was transformed into novelty, and the vast contour was turned from a seeming chaos into scenery of some charm. There is something in this species of locomotion called staging—something in the melancholy sheen of mountain moonlight—something in the dark-grey twilight as it treads on Luna's heels, like daring boyhood on decrepid age—something in the wistful thought of morning and the revived signs of life—the splendor of sunshine and the smoke from station-house just hovering into view—that wins one's admiration while it woos him with the music of the boiling kettle and the broiling steak. One may damn the darkness or make faces at the moon—and curse kind sleep for what the stage-coach should be blamed for—but it is impossible for a sane man, with appetite in his teeth and two dollars in his pocket, to damn the cozy comfort of station-keeper's cabin while he's trying the side-bacon, or buttering sleep-jacks for your plate.

Excuse us, please, for seeming want of courtesy, in not introducing to you before now our six or eight companions de voyage. One of 'em is a son of Crispin, going from Colorado to the gold fields farther north. Another is a somewhat gay Salt Laker, a Gentle by religion, a wagon-boss by adoption, and a blacksmith by design. This disciple of Vulcan devotes his winters to the snow, but by way of change, bull-whacks it every spring. Number three is a reticent Reese Riverite, bolstering his own blankets and bothering none of us as far as heard from. Next is an American citizen of African descent, destined for the Stinkwater, like the whole of us, and lately from the Boise climate. He went from there to open business among the "Saints," but some days' stay convinced him that their ways were worse than his, and more bastardizing in the whole. Number five is a lunk old lady passenger who hails from Austin, somewhere on Reese River, and sports the sobriquet of "Sage Hen." A short sojourn in the "City of the Saints" quite satisfied her that those "exaltors" of her sex were but brute butchers of his civility, under the blood-dyed cloak of sacralized religion. Number six was Miss Minnie S.—something, quite a fashionable female, also of the commercial class, and hailed from Idaho city. She, too, is en route for Virginia City and Helena, to have her name emblazoned in gold letters on the list of "high-toned artists" of the burdy-gurdy school. Two other passengers there were, from Boise to the Blackfoot mines, men of toil, though too easily allured by the ignis fatuus of every distant eldorado.

The Territory of Idaho, as now located, intervenes between Utah and Montana. Its galler shape, so speaking, rests solely upon Utah, while its toe touches the south-western line of Dakota, (soo to be called Wyoming), and its heel supports itself on the north-western corner of Nevada; Oregon and Washington bound it perpendicularly on the west. British Columbia caps its narrow neck or head, and the Bitter Root Mountains, with a section of the Sierra Madre, make the hypothesis that separates it from Montana. From near Boise River Crossing, therefore, to the summit of the Rocky Mountain Pass, we travel through the "Gem of the Mountains," Idaho. Soon after leaving Bear River Station we climb the bare divide which, as a watershed, turns some of the streams southeasterly, into Bear River, and thence to Salt Lake; and others south of west, to swell Snake River Fork, thence through Idaho and Washington to the Pacific, growing with their growth and strengthening with their strength until they swell that old-time stream

"Where rolls the Oregon
And hears no sound save its own murmuring."
Idaho stretches even over close to Bridger. One of its thriving county seats, called Soda Springs, (near where, in the mid-winter of '62, General Connor whipped those Indian herds), is situated some scores of miles due east; and westward, old Fort Hall, a fortification of the Indian-fearing fur-trade, stands less distant on the banks of the clear Snake River. The Snake or Lewis Fork of the great Columbia (Oregon) River rises, as you all may know, within a mile of that same spring from and runs in an opposite direction to it till it forms the fabled fence between Oregon and Idaho. This curiously shaped river, as it runs from Montana down through Idaho, has twice or thrice the volume of the Snake's Peak Plate. Snake-like running through that dim diversity of country, from its sage-land source to the South Boise, its Indian cognomens were well named respectively Shoshonee (crooked, winding), and the Sage Brush River. On its way more westward, which we hope to follow a few weeks from now, are situated the Great and Salmon Falls, the former of which (a sublime cataract) is said to quite surpass the great Niagara, for volume, width and altitude. On that terra incognita called its head, there are said to be seen, close by, some thousand piled-up petrifications of the serpentine and saurian species, perfect in their shapes and chameleon-like in color. Live rattlesnakes, which were heavy on the life, were reported most abundant on this Fork's head streams, surrounding the explorers with their tails or climbing up the sage-brush to salute them with kiss—playfulness of which a very little would suffice for sentiment with us.

"Where the mighty Missouri rolls down to the sea."

The first "home-station" north of Utah's boundary is Deep Creek, 35 miles from Bear River; the next is in Marsh Valley, 30 miles more northward; the next is at the mouth of that terror-stricken stretch called Portneuf Cañon. Robbers' Roost or the Road-Agent's Rendezvous, whichever you may choose to term that twenty-eight-mile cavern close wallied by terraced heights and pillared ranges which support the clouds and keep both sun and moon eclipsed eternally. Emerging from this tunnel made by Nature in her maddest mood—where in most foul and fearless tragedies have been acted, we welcome a wide park which, like a lake of lava, lies sheeny in the distance, and on whose hospitable shore stands Pocatello Station. Here we have a dinner geometrically square, served up by an intelligent reader of this paper, who was too true to his word to stay in Mormon scordum after the faint dawn of light had hovered on her home and reasoned self-respect. Across the spacious plains of the Snake River valley, fifty miles or so, and we reach the Overland Ferry at Cedar Point, a place on that river eighteen miles above the Gibson Ferry and thirty miles from Eagle Rock Bridge—the intersection of the Boda Springs and Bridger road to Oregon and Montana. Presently those three towering peaks called by the first French trappers the "Trois Tetons," (women's breasts) break easterly in view, now blushing bashfully in their bare garb, and now coquettishly inviting the near clouds to kiss 'em. Westerly are seen the "Two Great Buttes," apparently upheavings of the great eruptive age. Thirty miles to Camass Creek, (the meaning of that word is where old Noah Webster and ourselves are wanting), through sands and lava rock, on one side, and the prettiest of mountain lakes upon the other, and we ascend in sight of the great Rocky Mountain Range, (before us, and Montana,) while to the east are calmly stretched the Wind River Ranges, and towards the west of north the Bitter Root peaks protrude themselves to view. Thirty miles farther on, and Pleasant Valley station give us other food to feed on than those mountain range of all, dividing Idaho from Montana, must be scaled before this eldorado can be entered. Contrary to the general belief, this backbone of the continent is here crossed before the inexperienced mountain traveler thinks he has assaulted even the first redoubt. The "pass" is pure; a broad table-land, twenty miles in width, with snow no deeper than it was in Salt Lake valley during winter. 'Twas over this that Lewis and Clarke, in 1806, came down from the Upper Missouri to follow the Snake River to its confluence with the Oregon or Columbia. And 'twas over this that the "pilgrims" from Pike's Peak, in '62, strayed from their due west direction for the Salmon River Mines, and stumbled against the golden nuggets of Grasshopper Gulch, at what's now known as Bannack, in Montana. A ride of twenty miles takes us out of Idaho and into Montana Territory, leaving the Rocky Mountains to both our south and our northward. Here we meet the "Junction," a station kept by Mr. Pattee for the O. S. Line. The roads to Bannack and Virginia cities diverge from here, those three points forming an equilateral triangle. Were it not for the mail, which has to be delivered en route at Bannack, we would drive north-easterly direct to Virginia City as soon as it takes to go northwesterly to Bannack, a distance of say seventy miles. En route to the latter, the Missouri Springs, Red Rock and Horse Prairie stations intervene, with sage-brush plains and snowy hills requiring change from the coach to sleigh and vice versa. It was at the latter place that Lewis and Clarke, sixty winters ago, spent a season waiting for Indians to pass along, so as to swap their States canoes and grub for Cayuse ponies wherewith to "pack" their way to Boise and thence by boats again to the Columbia.

Thus far, indulgent reader, have we had your patience—over eighty miles of Utah's settlements; over a 300-mile belt of Idaho; and over the mountains to Montana. This third tedious letter, therefore, ends epistolary items "From Utah to Montana." Henceforth, and for the sake of change, we shall essay to entertain you on "Montana as it is." Nor would we thus have put your patience to the test, were it not for the sake of showing to the easterners, whether they stay at home, or travel hither, that the contour of the mountain regions between Mormonism and Montana is not such a monster myth as many of them have heretofore supposed,—that though, along this route, the snowy spurs and bleak concentric ranges rise and run in every shape and sections, yet there are lovely lawns and pleasing parks, rolling hills and rippling rivulets to civilize the scene and make it, as a whole, what traveling through New England is esteemed for—geniality and grandeur. The ranches on the route, the ten-mile stations, the travelers to and fro, and the occasional fleet of "prairie schooners" freighted with Utah flour, and weather-bound on the way, to weigh anchor in the spring—all afford a friendly feeling and assure us that traveling in the Rocky Mountains is quite different from what the books had caused us to believe. And the train of thought these scenes of travel seriously suggest, to the true citizen, are not without their moral benefit to himself and his country; for, as the venerable Bryant has beautifully said,

"The mountains—they proclaim
The everlasting creed of Liberty!
That creed is written on the entranced snow
Thundered by torrents which no power can hold
Save that of God when He sends forth His cold
And breath'd by winds that through the free
Heaven blow!"

GOLDRICK.

PROMOTION.—We are pleased to learn that Capt. J. F. Skelton, Chief Commissary of Subsistence of the District of Utah, has been appointed to a Brevet Majorship "for gallant and meritorious conduct throughout the war." There are but few officers who have served through the late rebellion that can show a more brilliant record, or are more deserving of favor at the hands of the Government than Major Skelton. Entering the 1st Iowa as a private in 1861, he participated in the battle of Wilson's Creek and the other leading fights in Missouri, and at the expiration of his three months term of service re-enlisted in the 2d Iowa and followed Gen. Grant through the battles of Fort Donelson and Shiloh to the surrender at Vicksburg, when he was commissioned in the 17th Iowa, and with that regiment took part in the campaigns of Grant and Sherman in Tennessee and Georgia, and finally accompanied the latter on his grand march to the Atlantic. After the surrender of Johnson in North Carolina he was assigned to the Subsistence Department, and finally ordered to report to General Connor for duty. He carried the scars of eight wounds, received in action, and has been confined in rebel prisons twice, and each time has succeeded in making his escape, being the first officer that ever escaped from Libby prison, and on the other occasion he left his prison in Georgia and in an open skiff made his way to a ship twelve miles from shore. Government cannot do too much for officers of his stamp.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, March 29.
In the Senate, Sumner moved that a copy of the resolution in reference to the case of Stockton, be communicated to the Governor of New Jersey, adopted.
Poland, of Vermont, said he would ask indulgence to pronounce a eulogy on his late colleague Mr. Foot at a future time, he offered a resolution that Senators wear the badge of mourning the remainder of the session, adopted. Trumbull moved that at 12.15 the Senate take recess till 1 o'clock, at which hour the funeral services will be commenced, the galleries crowded, on the floor were the President and Cabinet, General Grant, Supreme Court Judges, members of the House, Diplomatic Corps, and officers of the army and navy; at one o'clock the corpse was brought in, escorted by the Committee of Arrangements, the following being pall bearers: Fessenden, Harris, Johnson, Guthrie, Lane of Ind., and Sumner; Rev. Dr. Gray, chaplain, read Scripture and offered a prayer after which Rev. Byron Sumnerland proceeded to deliver the funeral sermon.

Chicago, March 30.
The Supreme Court of Wisconsin has unanimously decided that colored men are entitled to vote in that State, upon the following grounds, namely:

In 1849, an amendment to the Constitution striking the word white from the article of suffrage, received 8,263 votes against 4,075. There being a total of 21,739 votes cast at the same general election, the canvassers declared the amendment not ratified, for the reason that it did not receive a majority of all the votes cast. The Supreme Court now decide, upon a test case submitted, that the canvassers had no right to make such a decision, and that the Constitutional requirement of a majority of all the votes cast at such an election, meant only a majority of all votes cast on this particular question; therefore the amendment abolishing suffrage was adopted seventeen years ago, and must hereafter be regarded as in full force.

Justice Downer announced the above decision of the Court, to which Chief Justice Dixon added the supplementary opinion that whereas other amendments to the Constitution might be adopted by a majority of votes cast for or against the same at a special or general election, the Constitution only required the suffrage amendment to be submitted at a general election, and did not intend that the votes at the same election upon other subjects should be connected either for or against extending the right of suffrage; and that any other construction would be contrary to the American idea that the will of the majority voting upon any subject should prevail. Dixon further declared that the acquiescence of the subsequent Legislature and the people in the decision of the canvassers in 1849, and subsequent attempts on two occasions to adopt the same amendment, does not invalidate the ratification which the Court now declares as fully adopted in 1849. Colored men who have lived one year in the State will vote at local elections next Tuesday.

The bill making eight hours a legal day's work passed the Wisconsin House of Representatives on Wednesday by 50 against 36. The next day it was reconsidered and postponed to the 4th of July by 54 against 42, thus killing the measure.

The Wisconsin House of Representatives also adopted a resolution submitting to the people the question of calling a Constitutional Convention.

Hennaberg's brewery, at St. Paul, Minnesota, the largest in the city, was burned on the 27th, loss $75,000. The brewery has been in the hands of the Government for defrauding the revenue, and it is supposed it was set on fire.

The Supreme Court of the United States decides, in a case appealed from Massachusetts, that a license to sell liquor under the Internal Revenue act does not give Federal protection against the enforcement of State prohibition laws.

A strong lobby liquor dealers' association is now at Washington urging an amendment of the Internal Revenue act so as to give protection to all who pay license.

Trenton, N. J., March 29.
The Senatorial question begins to be exciting. The House to day passed a resolution for a joint convention next Wednesday, to elect a Senator, but the resolution was lost in the Senate—yeas 8, nays 10—President Scott, Radical, saying he wanted first to know who the man would be.

W. J. Washington, March 30.
The House is not in session, having adjourned to Monday. There is much interest felt here in the selection of a successor of Senator Stockton. Most of the New Jersey politicians have been called home, and it is understood an exciting contest is going on about Trenton. The prospects from this standpoint is not favorable to the election of an out-and-out Union man. The friends of Mr. Stockton assert that they have purchased a Republican member of the

New Jersey Senate, in which body the Unionists have but one majority, and will have thus prevented the election of a Republican Senator from that State.
Ex United States Marshal Ward Lamon has addressed a letter to President Johnson relative to the views of the late President Lincoln on restoration. After denouncing Stevens and the radicals as dis-Unionists, Mr. Lamon says: I came here as Mr. Lincoln's special friend, and was marshal of this district during the whole of his administration, down to the day of his death. I was in a most confidential and intimate relation with him. I had many free conversations with him on this very subject of restoration. I was made entirely certain by his own repeated declarations to me that he would exert all his authority, power and influence to bring about immediate reconciliation between the two sections of the country. As far as it depended on him, he would have had the Southern States represented in both Houses of Congress within the shortest possible time. All the energies of his nature were given to a vigorous prosecution of the war, while the rebellion lasted, but he was equally determined upon a vigorous prosecution of peace as soon as armed hostilities should be ended. He knew the base designs of the radicals to keep up strife for their own advantage, and he was determined to thwart them as he himself told me very often.

A Havre letter says the number of emigrants from Germany arriving to take ships for America has lately increased to an extraordinary degree, not less than 1000 emigrants are lodging in one quarter of St. Francis alone, awaiting vessels. There is much feeling here among stockholders of the C. S. Telegraph Company, in regard to the action of the trustees, and a meeting will be held in a day or two to consider what is to be done. The Brazilian fleet remains at Corrientes awaiting the arrival of the Admiral, when operations will be commenced, but it is believed that the obstructions in the river are so complete that vessels will be able to do much. The question of abolishing slavery in Brazil will be brought before an adjournment of the session of the Imperial Assembly takes place.

Just as the new clothes hit the streets, from every shop and store the motto, "What from many a source we drew we give, tho' not the whole as new."

An inveterate old bachelor says ships are called "she" because they always keep a man on the lookout.

An Albany paper says that Jeff. Davis is afflicted with a sore throat. A New Haven paper says he ought to have it tied up.

It is vain to stick your finger in the water, and, pulling it out, look for the hole; and equally vain to suppose that however large a space you occupy, the world will miss you when you die.

SOME cute Yankees in Maine have been making money this winter by making bear snouts out of India rubber and gutta percha, and selling them to the Indians, who take them to the New Brunswick authorities and get $3.00 a piece for them, the New Brunswickers not knowing them from the real article.
